

RENEWED CONCERN FOR RISK OF MAJOR ASTEROID IMPACT DISASTER

INITIAL DATA SUGGESTED NEW ASTEROID WOULD CAUSE AN EXTINCTION-LEVEL EVENT IN JUST 17 YEARS

ON 05 JULY A NEW ASTEROID was detected by Linear Observatory's automated sky survey programme in New Mexico, USA, and named "2002-NT7".

The meteor was classified as a "near earth object" – an object with a path that brings it particularly close to our planet. Since the asteroid was discovered astronomers all over the world have been watching closely, and based on data from almost 200 observations they confirmed that, of the 448 NEOs being publically tracked, 2002-NT7 was officially the most dangerous asteroid ever seen.

Researchers estimated that asteroid 2002-NT7 would collide with earth on Friday, 1 February 2019, with an impact velocity of 28 km per second, weighing in at 2 km (1.4 miles) in diameter, causing cataclysmic destruction on a continental scale and triggering global climatic changes.

Astronomers rated the object with a score of 0.06 on the Palermo technical scale (Level 1 on the Torino scale), making NT7 the first object to be given a positive value.

Dr Benny Peiser of Liverpool John Moores University, UK, warned: "this asteroid has now become the most threatening object in the short history of asteroid detection."

The world helplessly awaited further announcements, while the media played-down the worst fears by focusing on scientist's hopes that further research may predict a very near miss, rather than the direct hit predicted, during early 2019.

Finally, at the end of the month, based on more detailed data accumulated from observations to date, Dr Don Yeomans, of NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, announced: "We can now rule out any impact possibilities for 1 February 2019."

ESCAPE FROM EXTINCTION

As the world breathed a sigh of relief, Dr Peiser responded with renewed concern: "It would be prudent to caution interested observers that further observations in the near future could result in new impact dates."

If further observations do reveal that 2002-NT7 is on a direct collision course with earth, we will have several opportunities to deflect the asteroid because it orbits the sun approximately every 2.2 years.

NEW THREAT TO PUBLIC DISCLOSURE

The intense international interest in 2002-NT7 seems to have prompted a long-overdue debate in the astronomical community. The Insider was alarmed to learn that many astronomers are so unhappy with the way in which the media reported this scare that they are calling for a review of official policy on public disclosure.

SECRECY IN THE STARS

The appearance in March of comet Ikeya-Zhang was a welcome surprise for twilight stargazers, but also a disturbing reminder that we frequently have only a few weeks warning when a potentially cataclysmic object is heading our way.

Classical superstition sees comets as omens warning of impending tragedy. The last appearance of this comet in 1661 heralded the outbreak of the Great Plague (Black Death) in Europe (1661-1665 CE), and the great fire of London struck in the following year of 1666.

Insiders will be aware that comets are important in the folklore of Freemasonry, frequently depicted in Masonic illustrations as daggers in the sky.

VACCINATION SCANDAL LEAVES BRITAIN DEFENCELESS WHILE GOVERNMENT ADVISORS WARN OF IMMINENT BIOTERROR ATTACK

THE U.K. GOVERNMENT is stockpiling 'the wrong vaccine' to protect the country from the growing threat of a smallpox attack by terrorists, according to U.S. experts.

A report published by the Potomac Institute, an independent U.S. research organisation, has raised crucial doubts about whether the vaccine would be effective in the event of an attack.

DISASTER OF BIBLICAL PROPORTIONS

On 30 April The Brookings Institution, which advises the U.S. Government on national security issues, produced a report called "Protecting the American Homeland", warning that a single biological attack in the U.S. could cause 10 times more deaths than a nuclear strike. Yet bioweapons are much easier to obtain.

THE WORLD PREPARES FOR BIOTERRORIST ATTACKS

In response to growing anticipation that terrorists will strike using biological agents as weapons of mass destruction, The World Health Organisation (WHO) has postponed their plans to destroy the world's last remaining stocks of native smallpox virus.

In America, the Government has now responded to the imminent threat by implementing a National Immunization Programme. The New York Times reported that 500,000 health care and emergency workers would be vaccinated against smallpox, while preparations are made to safeguard the American public.

This is not a convenient time for British government to be taking inappropriate action, let alone trying to hide the truth from the public.

DISTURBING SECRETS

The Insider is concerned that public attention may be diverted from this extremely serious National Security issue by the media sideshow surrounding the scandalous discovery that Powderject Pharmaceuticals was given the £32 million contract to supply the wrong vaccine very soon after its chief executive, Paul Drayson, donated £50,000 to the Labour Party currently in government.

The British government claim to be following reliable advice from expert sources, but unfortunately their information is not being shared with the public. The Insider has been aware of uncertainty inside official channels about the U.K. government's policy on bioterrorism since 7 July, when Dr Gibson, Chairman of the government's Commons Science and Technology Committee, voiced his concern during an interview on BBC Radio 4's Today programme.

Dr Gibson complained that the government's rationale is: "clouded in secrecy and it's very hard to find out." Commenting specifically about alleged corruption behind the vaccination contract, he demanded: "It is imperative that we have a full independent enquiry into the whole sordid affair of the smallpox scandal."

POLITICAL CORRUPTION OR GOVERNMENT CONSPIRACY?

Readers familiar with the Illuminati may find this unravelling chaos strikingly consistent with the infamous Illuminist strategy of infiltrating major organisations and trying to destabilise national interests. The reader is strongly encouraged to investigate this topic further, in order to appreciate such parallels.

Could serious events like the vaccination scandal be stage-managed by secret societies with a hidden agenda?

THE INSIDER REPORTS

We shall endeavour to keep our readers up to date with key events in the unfolding issue of bioterrorism until such a time as the immediate threat is deemed to be over.
